128. (New) A method for displaying items in a graphical user interface, comprising the steps of:

displaying a plurality of said items at a default height in a region of said graphical user interface; detecting that a cursor is within a threshold distance from any of said plurality of items; and increasing the height of at least one of said items closest to said cursor from said default height to a fixed maximum level when the cursor is detected to be within said threshold distance and maintaining said height at said fixed level while said cursor is equal to or less than said threshold distance from said one item.
